

Discover the Value of CompWest's Keep at Work[®] Program

CompWest provides many value-added services that ultimately help reduce costs for policyholders — one of which is the Keep at Work[®] (KAW) Program. This proprietary program shortens the duration of disability and assists in keeping injured workers functioning effectively in the workplace.

CompWest's KAW team provides prompt and focused personal interaction with the employer, physician and injured worker that results in a reduction of claims and overall workers' compensation costs. In fact, planning for an injured worker's return to work starts at the time they are hired, before an injury even occurs.

The Purpose of the Keep at Work[®] Program

As an employer, you can play a significant role in the recovery of an injured worker. A Keep at Work program is a proven way of decreasing an injured worker's recovery time by allowing them to quickly and safely return to work with temporary work restrictions at the earliest medically allowable date and in accordance with their medical treatment plan.

The success of a Keep at Work[®] program is contingent on the employer's commitment to the process. Through interaction and communication with the injured worker, medical provider and your management team, the goal is to assist in getting the injured worker prompt and proper medical care so they can return to their current job or another form of a temporary work.

Components of a Keep at Work® Program

CompWest will help you manage the major components of a successful Keep at Work® program, which includes establishing a "job bank." The job bank should include job descriptions of usual and customary job duties for all employees so employers are prepared in the event of a workplace injury. Job descriptions should then be provided to the medical clinics so they are readily available for physician review when an injury occurs.

The components of an effective Keep at Work® program are as follows:

Identify temporary work assignments:

- Transitional work
- Alternative work
- Modified work
- Reduced hours
- Job sharing

“The CompWest KAW program is considered best practice and the Ward Group has seen few competitors approach this process with the same degree of professionalism and client impact.”

Prior to an injury:

- Complete a “job bank” with job descriptions that document all jobs that are being performed by your employees.
- Look for ways that the duties for each job can be modified to accommodate an injured worker.
- Create job descriptions for the transitional duties identified.
- Provide your medical clinics with a copy of the entire job bank.

When an injury occurs:

- Report the injury and refer the injured worker for medical treatment.
- Meet with the injured worker to review and complete an Employee’s Responsibility Form.
- Submit the Employee’s Usual and Customary Job Description* to the treating physician for review to determine if the worker is able to perform the job duties.

Returning the injured worker to transitional/ temporary work:

- After the treating physician releases the injured worker, temporary work restrictions will be provided.
- Complete a modified/alternative job description and send to the treating physician for review and approval.
- When appropriate, the employer and injured worker discuss temporary modified/alternate jobs and/or reduced work hours.
- After the details of the Keep at Work® plan have been agreed upon, the employer will obtain all of the necessary signatures on this form and provide a copy to the claims representative.

Types of Temporary Work Assignments:

If an employee is not physically capable of returning to full duty, temporary or modified work provides them the opportunity to remain a productive part of the workforce. This helps to increase their morale and decreases recovery time. There are various types of temporary work that should be considered:

Transitional work consists of assignments that meet specific medical restrictions set by a doctor, while allowing the injured worker to perform some of their current job duties or a different job that the employer has identified. Transitional work should be evaluated frequently while remaining in close communication with the injured worker and treating physician. The goal is to progressively match the injured worker's capabilities as function is restored after an injury.

Modified work involves any changes to the original job that allows the injured worker to perform in that position. Examples include changing the work station or tools, removing tasks that the injured worker cannot perform and reducing the time spent on a particular task.

Alternative work involves offering the injured worker a position other than the current job to meet temporary work restrictions.

Reduced hours offer less than full-time work to meet temporary restrictions. Wage loss will be calculated and provided to the injured worker.

Job sharing is a flexible work option where two or more employees share a single job.

Proven Results

The Keep at Work® program has been extremely successful since its inception in 2011. In the last five years, policyholders have saved more than 171,050 weeks of Temporary Total Disability benefits (with a cost avoidance of $74.9 million).
